Location

Lancaster is a busy University city and the principal town of North Lancashire, which benefits from excellent communication links via the nearby M6 motorway, and the West Coast main line railway. It sits to the south of the Lake District National Park and to the west of the Yorkshire Dales, and is approximately equidistant between Preston and Kendal. The city has a population in excess of 45,000 and a catchment of 130,000 as well as a large student population.

Description

The subject character premises occupy a prominent position on Church Street, on the fringes of Lancaster's central retail area, being adjacent to the Castle precincts and Lancaster Castle, which in coming years is to become a major tourist attraction.

Church Street is now the recognised area for restaurant use.
